POETRY

THE STEP ON THE STAIR. Twilight is coming, and work is o'er.
And I am quite free from all care;
I sliently, patiently watch and I wait
For the sound of the step on the

Tis a welcoming sound to my listening

And my heart beats quick and fast For I know that my darling's return

Baby is alceping within his warm nest

The ten-kettle sings is loud glee; Nearer the sound of the step on the

He comes, and I'm happy; my heart is

I've no trouble, nor shadow of care. How he'll laugh when I tell him I watch and wait.

For the sound of his step on the stair.

God grant that we ever may thus hap-

All triain we'll equally share; If I were called first to that bright

The blue sen the blue sen.

Where waves like little hands—
Crisp, white-innered—clutch and grasp
The long silver sands.

The green sea, the green sea. Where the white-capped breakers

And shine, like thin, carved Chinese jade.
In the warm, bright sun.

The gray mea, the gray ses.

Surf flung like strings of pearls.

The pale mists flowing endlessly by
Where the white foam whiris.
